Oral peptide delivery requires overcoming the intestinal barrier

- Peptide drugs combine high specificity and efficacy across diabetes, cancer, cardiovascular disease, and more.
- Oral dosing is convenient, painless, and better for adherence, but bioavailability is very low: acid, enzymes, mucus, and a tight epithelial barrier all stand in the way.
- Permeation enhancers are unlocking oral peptides
 - Rybelsus (semaglutide) uses SNAC
 - Mycapssa (octreotide) uses caprylate (C8)
 - Lipfendra (enlicitide) uses caprate (C10)
